

Media Contact:

Erica Houskeeper, Director of Communications

erica@polarprods.com

802-498-5495

March 1, 2026

Wild Foods with Kevin Chap Premieres on PBS Nationwide in April 2026

Stockbridge, Vt. — Wild Foods is a new PBS environmental food and travel series following Kevin Chap as he forages in forests, fields and waterways to rediscover food in its natural environment.

Wild Foods premieres in April 2026 and explores how to rewild America's food system using sustainable and creative methods. In each episode, Chap gathers local wild ingredients, shows wild-cooking techniques and recipes, highlights Indigenous traditions and explores ways to connect with our food.

"There are small steps we can take to change the way we eat and interact with the natural world," says Chap, a professional forager, environmentalist and educator from Stockbridge, Vermont.

Wild Foods features ranchers, chefs, educators, and farmers. The show also highlights Native cultures and First Nations that continue sustainable food traditions today, including the Nulhegan Band of the Coosuk, Passamaquoddy, Mohawk, Oneida, Chippewa Cree, Hopi and Tohono O'odham.

The first season of Wild Foods includes eight episodes filmed in Vermont, Montana, Maine, New York and Arizona.

Chap explains that the show examines the problems of invasive species, industrialized farming and climate change, but also focuses on solutions and alternative food practices rooted in tradition and new ideas.

"The show is not just about foraging. We look to nature for inspiration as we explore how to create new approaches for wildland ecosystems, forestry, biomimicry and climate resilience," Chap says.

For more information, visit www.wildfoodsnetwork.com

Wild Foods is produced by Polar Productions and distributed by American Public Television. The show premieres on PBS in April 2026. Check your local PBS station listings for more information.